

Working to Improve Life

The Eureka Institute in Italy was formed in 1987 with the mission to actively research and experiment with eco-compatible disciplines aimed at improving life qualities. The purpose is not only material, but comprehensive of the wellbeing of the whole human and the environment. For the human being, this means physical comfort, a healthy vitality, internal harmony, and individual and spiritual growth. A healthy human being cannot be separated from a healthy relationship and responsibility toward all the kingdoms of nature.

For decades, Eureka Institute has conducted in-depth studies and trials particularly in homeopathy and its application in organic and non-organic fields. Research done by Eureka has shown positive results using isotherapeutic products in dealing with pollutants in soil and water.

Because it is understood that no environment can be improved as long as pollution persists within it, the depollution work is paramount. No amount of help can be truly effect to improve soil or water health if residual pollutant are still there. For this reason, all agricultural and architectural work done using the methods developed by Eureka, begin with depollution at a physical and even a spiritual level.

We strive for scientifically objective trials and results, but also act out of conscience and a love for the earth.

The Trinium Method has been developed after decades of trials and experimentation using what was previously known as homeodynamics. The homeodynamic method has been successfully used in hundreds of farms, especially in Italy, Spain and Greece.

Now, the Trinium Method is available for use in North America. Viva la Vida Foundation is available for consultations and guidance on the methodology and is the sole distributor of the Trinium products.
